Larissa is a large scale creative visionary with over 16 years experience in executive leadership from British Columbia, Canada. She spends her time coaching leaders, facilitating transformative education, and leading projects that truly move the dial to end human suffering, environmental destruction, and systemic failures. She works cross industry- law enforcement, public and private sector, justice services, Indigenous-led organizations, and non profits- and was awarded the 2017 Department of Justice Excellence in Victim Services Award in Canada for her work.

Larissa has created over 50 innovative ESG projects (Environment-Social-Governance) across North America, including founding Canada's first Financial Inclusion Project with the United Nations and six major financial institutions, developing the first Canadian integrated mental health and addictions treatment program for survivors of modern day slavery, tech safety with UBER, and an employment equity and inclusion project with Slack. She is a sought after keynote speaker, headlining events for organizations such as the RCMP, Native Courtworkers and Counseling Association, the United Nations, the Immigration and Refugee Board of Canada, Toronto Police, ESDC, and the Trilateral US-Canada-Mexico Human Trafficking Working Group. In her offtime, you will find her painting and snowshoeing.

Areas of specialization include addressing unethical supply chains, ending violence against marginalized populations, treating mental health and substance misuse, developing financial inclusion, eradicating inequality, preventing human rights violations, and supporting migrant labour work forces.
